During that year he was sent to the Governor, to take command in the Dutch war in which the Dutch engaged, or were about to engage, with the Indians situated to the south and west of the Connecticut settlements. This war lasted through the summer of 1646, and was terminated by a great battle at Stratford in Horseneck, in which the Dutch with difficulty obtained the

Battle Ax PLUG

Five cents' worth of "BATTLE AX" will serve two chewers just about as long as 5 cents' worth of other brands will serve one man. This is because a 5 cent piece of "BATTLE AX" is almost as large as the 10 cent piece of other high grade brands.

HUNDREDS PERISH

In a Cyclone Which Struck St. Louis and Suburbs.

Many Buildings Are In Ruins.—The Full Extent of the Disaster Is Not at This Time Known.

St. Louis, May 29.—It will be several days before definite information can be obtained as to the loss of life and injury to the unfortunate people who happened to be in the path of the cyclone which swept over portions of Missouri and Illinois, Wednesday afternoon. In addition to the killed and injured in St. Louis and East St. Louis, the cyclone killed many people as it advanced. Late dispatches give accounts of serious loss of life and maimings in quite a number of places. Appended is a table showing a careful estimate of the killed and injured, based on these dispatches:

Killed.	Injured.
St. Louis, Mo.,.....	200
East St. Louis,.....	300
Near Centralia, Ill.,.....	42
Buckington, Ill.,.....	2
Near Mount Vernon, Ill.,.....	20
Near Mexico, Mo.,.....	13
Near Vandalla, Ill.,.....	35

Totals..... 725
This number of killed may not be far from 600, and of the injured about 600. The greatest devastation in St. Louis is in the vicinity of Lafayette park. The storm came from the southwest, and dashed down the Mill Creek valley, razing residences and manufacturing plants on the bluffs on both sides. Among the first buildings struck was the Liggett & Meyers tobacco plant. It was destroyed, and 20 mechanics in one building were killed.

Shaw's celebrated garden and the beautiful Tower grove park were ruined. Statues were dashed from their pedestals, trees uprooted and all improvements carried away. Lafayette park, mostly in the path of the wind, is another ruin. This was the most beautiful small park in the city. The fashionable residences surrounding are wrecked. Lafayette avenue park, Mississippi avenue and Chouteau avenue are filled with the wreckage of splendid homes. The roofs and top stories were lifted off and alighted in the streets. Strangely enough the loss of life was not large in the vicinity.

Further east, breweries, houses and manufacturing plants were leveled. The wreckage so littered the streets that it is impossible to pass with a carriage. The power houses of two immense street railway lines were blown down. The roof of the big stores on Broadway, Sixth, Fifth, Fourth and Third streets were torn off, telegraph poles and wires were dashed earthward, and the tin plate glass windows of nearly all of the stores were broken. The roof of such a solid structure as the Merchants Exchange was tipped off and spread across Third street.

After clearing the boats from their wharves, the storm descended on the weakly constructed city of East St. Louis. Grain elevators, frame houses and hotels collapsed like eggshells. A section of the east approach of the famous Eads bridge was blown off and dropped in the river. A Chicago and Alton train was on the bridge, and was blown from the track. It was 90 feet in the air. Some of the coaches fell over, but struck a parallel track, and the train was saved. Nobody was killed on the train.

Dead bodies are piled up in the ruins of the freighthouses, many unidentified. The work of relief has begun. A big subscription is under way, and St. Louis is responding nobly. Public meetings will be held as soon as possible.

The dead are everywhere. At the Union depot perfect houses, several miles away, were buried beneath the falling walls. At the Koken barber supply works, west of Jefferson avenue, more fatalities occurred. At Niles' saloon, South Seventh street, the loss of life was frightful.

On the levee, on the streets surrounding Lafayette park, in Compton hill, everywhere in the path of the hurricane, maimed and dead were left to the most awful tale of a disaster that ever was recorded in St. Louis.

The hurricane struck St. Louis in the southwest corner. It raged through Mill Creek valley and moved down a series of structures in South St. Louis. It swept eastward along Chouteau park, and at Sixth street took a northerly trend. The district between Sixth street and the river does not contain a building that is uninjured.

When about the central part of the city, north and south, the storm took an eastward tack and struck East St. Louis in its central part. Here it seems to have spread in nearly all directions. The St. Louis streets, along which the most damage was done, are South Jefferson, Lafayette, Chouteau, Park, Papin, Sixth, Seventh and Broadway. This wreckage fills all the cross streets in this district.

There are 15 missing from the city hospital, which was wrecked. How many of the missing are buried in the ruins is not known. Dr. Starkoff believes that a score of patients are dead. The most remarkable freak of the storm was the manner in which it allowed the suffering inmates of the institution to escape its fury. Daylight revealed debris where the Hamshackle hospital stood. The western portion bore the semblance of a building only. Over the west part of the yard was a flat pile of debris. It had been division "M," the acute surgical ward. The walls that are standing are likely to topple over any minute, and every effort is being made to remove the patients to places of safety. So far but three patients are known to be among the dead.

The tornado struck the building just before supper time, and to this fact is attributable the remarkably small death list. All the patients who were able to be on their feet were being exercised. Many of them were sitting up, waiting for supper. The roar of the tornado was met with a chorus of shrieks and screams, and a stampede for the grape vine door in the hospital were 417 patients, most of them in the south wing. Dr. Sutter was in the east wing when he saw the storm coming.

In division one, all the prisoners are locked in their cells, as they are mostly crazy patients. Their maniacal yells and frenzied efforts to break the bars that imprisoned them probably never were equaled.

FELLOWSHIP CEMENTED.

Presbyterian Assembly Goes on Record in Christian Endeavorers' Favor.

Saratoga, May 27.—The Christian Endeavor won a victory yesterday in the Presbyterian general assembly. Those interested in the movement were in the majority, and they exercised their power.

The sum total of the assembly's action comprises the adoption of "A statement of relations between individuals, societies and churches," which was directed to be read in the various societies, and of a provision for the collection of Christian Endeavor statistics. Provision was made for a committee of five to report on the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip and on boys' brigades.

Secretary Haer of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor said: "The report, as finally adopted, will be welcomed by Presbyterian Endeavorers everywhere. It shows conclusively that this assembly believes our Christian Endeavor young people to be loyal Presbyterians, and that it also emphatically desires to take no steps that shall withdraw Endeavorers from the fellowship of young people of other denominations. It was a statement of denominational loyalty, and of a desire for spiritual interdenominational fellowship. I am confident the action will meet the hearty approval of thousands of young people and pastors, not only in the Presbyterian church, but in other denominations, who have been apprehensive that some action might be taken that would break the fellowship of Christian Endeavor."

No Work For Them.
Sanford, Me., May 26.—A few of the striking weavers of the Springfield cotton mills assembled at the gates yesterday to go to work, but they waited in vain, for the gate failed to open. The managers finally informed them that the factories would be shut down for an indefinite period, and that when the operatives were wanted they would be notified.
